COVERDALE MARRIED.

The Sequel and Conclusion of Harry Coverdale's Courtship.

What, Mrs. Coverdale--Alice. said the lady-'What is the matter?' Alice murmured out that favorite fiction of a had head ache.

'Oh, you must not tell me that; I know better,' said Mrs. Blusterton, with the freedom of seniority-- head aches don't make people cry; come now, I'm older than you, and I understand these things better; tell me all about it.

Mrs, Blusterton was not exactly the person Alice would have chosen for a confident, but women have a natural disposition to confide in somehody; all alone, without any friends, under the sense of a new grief, who had Alice to confide in? Beside, there is kindness, however roughly expressed; and Mrs. Blusterton was cyclently kind, and Alice, with many tears, did tell her 'all about it.'

Mrs. Blusterton meant well; we must put down her advice to that general justification, 'good intentions.

'Well, that's not much to cry about,'

she said; 'You're young yet; you have not had my experience; when you have you'll know better. If you could only hear Blusterion and me sometimes. You'll get used to it byand bye. But I'll tell you what you must do; you must depend on your-self, as I do. If you think your hus-band will always be amusing you, you're mistaken; it will be unlucky if he does not abuse you instead of amuse you. You must learn to amuse yourself, and be independent, like I am. If he doesn't go out with you, go out by yourself. If he leaves you alone at home, find company; pluck up a spirit, and he'll soon find he's got his match.'

Alice did not know how to pluck up the spirit her friend recommended, and she was so fond of Harry. That's it,' remarked Mrs. Bluster-

'You're too fond of him by half; and what's worse, you let him see it. The men take advantage of that. It will never do to go on that way, making yourself a perfect slave to his temper. I'm going over to see the Duchess myself. I see you're dressed, so just put on your bonnet and come with me.'

Alice did put on her bounct, and Mrs. Blusterion, happy in the con-sciousness that she was making common cause with an injured wife against 'those brutes, the men,' was both kind and cheerful; and the old Duchess was courteous and complimentury to the young bride, with whose quiet beauty she was much taken, and hoped to see her again; and what with the change of scene and new acquaintances, and the beautiful drive, Alice forgot her griefs for the time, and smiled as cheerfully, if she did not laugh so loudly, as her chaperone.

'And now,' said Mrs. Blusteriou, when they left the Duchess, 'you'll come home and have a bit of dinner with me. Blusterion's out, and will not be at home till late, I da e say, and we shall have it all quiet to our-

Alice said 'No' at first, but she thought Harry would not be home till late either, and she did not like to go home alose to her own sad thoughts, and she could get away early; and so she fell into the a rangement.

It was late before Alice did home. Mrs. Blusterton had been full of her 'experiences' and advice, and had mingled them with life in India, and told strange tales new to Alice, and had, in fact, talked away as incessantly as a machine wound up especially for the purpose. She gave her guest no time to think, in her kindly endeavors to amuse her. Affice listened to the voluble flood of talk, at first rather bored, and then, simple little creature as she was, amazed an lat last umused, without paying any particular attention to the passage of time, till she was aroused by hearing the clock strike.

She looked up startled—'Why, it is ten o'clock. Oh! how late it is, and it's an hour's drive.'

Well, said Mrs. Blusterton, 'your husband's not home yet, I'll be bound. I don't expect mine for this two hours. If I were you, I'd stay all night.' (Alice shook her head at the notion of such outrageous rebellion.) 'No I don't suppose you would; I would though; but John shall put the horses to at once."

The horses were put to, and Alice stood shawled ready to start. Why did she not go? She had begun to be afraid of Harry. What would be say? Oh, consense, was Mrs. Blus- nine tone.

terton's reply; what can he say? He left you to go out, and he don't expect you to be tied to a minute, I suppose; a pretty thing, indeed. Stay a moment; I'll go with you: and the

if she had gone alone-better if she had taken any one else than Virs Blusterton; but timidity does not reason well and sorrow is not apt to judge wisely, so they went together. In the meantime, as the hours passed by, Harry had grown from surprise into impatience, and from impatience into alarm—that sort of alarm which is nearly related to vexation and ill-temper. He was just on the point of ordering his horse and going in search of his wife, when the wheels of the approaching carriage were heard.

NEWPORT: Published every morning (Sundays excepted)

BY GEORGE T. HAMMOND, VI 123 Thumes Street.

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 10, 1859.

War upon Doorsteps.

We understand that on the evening of the 6th inst., the City Marshal addressed a note to Henry Bull, Esq., requiring that certain doorsteps in front of his estate in Thames Street, should be removed within ten days, or they would be removed by authority at his expense, and yesterday a suit was brought in behalf of the city to recover fines or damages on account of the same. We presume the city anthorities intend to set impartially for the public good, and if so all others who have steps projecting from their houses may expect to be dealt with in this summary manner.

Now there are probably one hundred houses in Thames Street, all having steps projecting into the street, and there are some streets where nearly all the doorsteps project, the removal of which will be the cause of much litigation in our courts, On Thames Street originally, nearly or quite all the houses had projecting door steps, which have been removed voluntarity to suit the convenience of the owners. So in regard to Mr. Bull's estate, which had projecting doorsteps from time immemorial up to a few years since, when the On Thames Street originally, nearly or morial up to a few years since, when the sidewalk was raised by the owner sufficently high to obviate the necessity of steps, and so remained until the city has lowered the grade so that the shops could not be conveniently used without steps, and Mr. Bull has reinstated them in the same plaes that they were taken from.

We fear this precipitate action on the part of our authorities may lead to much litigation between the city, Mr. Bull, and others who may have projecting doorstrps, as the subject involves the question us to whether the owners of estates on Thames Street are liable to pay for the new carb stone which is now being set, and for the expense of relaying the sidewalks, consequent upon altering the grade of the street. inder the statute passed last winter, of which the first section is as follows:

"Whenever the grade of any street "Whenever the grade of any street or highway shall be lawfully changed, and the estate of any abutting proprietor shall be injured thereby, the town in which such change of grade shall have been made, shall be liable to pay the damages occasioned to said estate by each changes of grade."

We are opposed to doorsteps and all other street obstructions, and would be glad to see all such removed, whenever it can be done with a due regard to personal rights, and without expensive litigation.

BATHING IN THE DEAD SEA.—A pleasant correspondent of the Boston Past, writing from Jerusalem, thus humorously describes his Dead Sea bath: "The Dead Sea has nothing of the desolation which it has been the pleasure of travelers to describe and it seamed to smile at the seamer. A voung man in California, under sensitive series and the seamer of the seamer. cribe, and it seemed to smile at the secret dread with which it inspired the pilgrim.

I, of course, took a bath here; and for a swimmer who has a fancy to keep his legs as well as his head out of the water, I imagine that it must be quite pleasant.—
My French friend, who is not a little inclined to corrulercy, complained that he could not get down into the water, and floated about, now one side up row another, or all the world like an inflated bladder On emerging from the water it was rapidly evaporated by the sun; and the salt crystabzing on our bodies, gave us the appearance of unimated sticks of rock entidy, or a family resemblance to Lot's wife. With a sensation upon our skin as if we had been pickled for foreign use, and with a taste in our mouths compounded of glauber salts and assisted, we concluded that the bath in the Dead Sea was enough for a lifetime,

GENERAL NEWS.

SERIOUS PLAY .- The Albany Knicker bocker tells of the rather serious play of some children, at the house of a Mr. Mon-Amazon put on a bonnet as though it were a helmet, and three on a shawl as though it were a coat of mail, and stood prepared to do battle with all the angry husbands in the universe.

It would have been better for Alice here! They returned to a room below; if she had gone alone better if she and fer withe some children, at the house of a Mr. Monlock, and the title. At noon she had not returned. Mrs. Monroe went to her neighbors', but her child was not there, nor had any of the folks there seen her. She went to the Fourth District Station-house, but she had not been brought there. The family became alarmed. Mrs. Monroe returned to the house of hor neighbors, and interrogated the children, from whom she learned that little Ella and gone up stairs, and that was all. It was now two o'clock.—Mr. Monroe's folks proceeded to an Mr. Monroe's folks proceeded to an upper room in the house, where the self-locking trunk attracted their attention. It was opened, and there lay little Ella asleep, but very faint from her close confinement. She was so weak that they had to lift her up. A physician was sent for, and she was soon all right again.

WRECK OF A SUHOONER AND LOSS OF WRECK OF A SCHOONER AND LOSS OF TEN LIVES.—Intelligence has been received at Halifax of the wreck of the schooner Ada, of Westport, N. S., and the loss of ten lives. The Ada sailed fron St. Bardes, Labrador, on the 30th of September, for Halifax. On the 7th of October, during a fearful gale of wind, she was driven on a ledge of rocks near Sandy Bay, and the vessel and all on board were lost. The followledge of rocks near Sandy Ray, and the vessel and all on board were lost. The following are the names of the lost: Mr. Joseph Higgings, of Halifax, supercargo, Capt. H. S. Bancroft, P. Flariarty, mate, and three seamen and the steward, all of Westport; George Brown, of Jersey, Master Lanergan, of Labrador, and Muster Morney, of East Buston. Eight of the loddies were recovered the next day. Mr. hodies were recovered the next day. Mr. Higgins' body and that of one of the boys, Higgins' body and that of one of the boys, taken from the cabin, were crushed among some barrols. Muster Lanergan was a nephew of Mr. Lanergan, the well-known pyrotechnist of Boston. His father formerly resided in that city, and the ladwas on his way there on a visit to his uncle. Muster Morey was on the schooner Franklin, of Beverly when she was wracked in the straits of Belle Isle, on the 14th of last August, and his father, a worthy mechanic August, and his father, a worthy mechanic of East Boston, had taken special pains to place him on board the Ada, as she was fine, stanch vessel, and her captain a skill-ful and prudent seamen ful and prudent scamon.

Capt. Hovey ran close to her, and ascertained that she was waterlogged—the sea making a complete breach over the alter part of the vessel. Several persons were on the forecastle; and in the forerigging, but the gale was so furious that no assistance could be readed to the complete of t tance could be rendered to the suffering seamen. After falling in with this vessel the Amazon experienced a tremendous gale, the ship having been hove to for 48 hours under close reefed maintopsail, and during this gale lost sight of the wreck. N. SHOWING PROPER RESENTMENT,-Rev Dr. Chickering, of the High Street Church and Rev. Mr. Moore of the Union Church exchanged pulpits on Sabbath morning last. When the latter was about half through his discourse at the High Street. Church, he suddenly stopped and remarked that the sermon had cost him a great deal of labor, but as it did not seem to interest the nutlinger, and as many of them created. the nuclience, and as many of them were asleep he would proceed with it no longer. He then closed the meeting with a prayer and benediction.—Portland Argus.
